TENER SAYS HE WILL REAPPOINT DR. DIXON

Republican Candidate Throws Down Gauntlet to Grim.

AT GRANGERS PICNIC

He Praises Work of State Health Department and Resents Sneering Comments of Democratic Gubernatorial Candidate.

Addressing a meeting yesterday at the grangers picnic, John K. Tener, Republican nominee for Governor, declared that if elected he will reappoint Dr. Samel G. Dixon as chief of Department of Health at Harrisburg. Mr. Tener, in so declaring himself, threw down the gauntlet to Webster Grim, the Democratic gubernatorial nominee, who recently indulged in sneering remarks relative to the work being done by the Department of Health.

This was but one of many interesting features of Mr. Tener's address. He expressed his deep interest in the welfare of the farmer and as unequivocally favoring a comprehensive school code and further improvement of our public school system. Mr. Tener is not an orator but his remarks, delivered in the matter-of-fact manner of the able business man, deeply impressed his audience.

The presence of Mr. Tener on the picnic grounds attracted a large crowd to the grangers encampment. Accompanying Mr. Tener were John M. Reynolds, nominee for Lieutenant Governor; Perry A. Shaner, of Pittsburg, a close frien of Mr. Tener; Walter Gaither, the latter's private secretary, and Walter J. Christy, a staff correspondent of the Pittsburg "Gazette-Times" and one of the most brilliant newspaper men in the State.

Republican County Chairman Harry Keller, County Chairman-elect Henry C. Quigley and a number of other well known Republicans greeted Mr. Tener and his party when they arrived in Bellefonte yesterday morning and accompanied them to Grange Park. There the distinguished visitors were welcomed by Leonard Rhone and other grange officials and escorted to the headquarters, where an informal reception was held. Mr. Tener was greatly interested in the exhibition of the grangers and entered into the spirit of the occasion with enthusiasm. Everything was delightfully informal, as was illustrated at a luncheon given by Mr. Rhone in honor of the Republican standard bearers. Mr. Tener and "Farmer" William T. Creasy, one of the managers of the Keystone party, found themselves seated side by side at the luncheon table and they had a good laugh over the incident.

County Chairman Keller presided over the meeting, held at 1 o'clock in the auditorium. Mr. Tener, on being introduced, said:

"I am informed that we are today addressing members of the Grange, or that the majority of those present are members of that splendid organization. I also understand that your association is non-political, and was organized for the advancement of agriculture and the development of the highest type of manhood and womanhood, and if I am correct then let me congratulate you upon the objects and purposes for which you are banded together. Far and wide the achievements of the Grange are known and recognized as tending, not only to a material advancement of your welfare, but as a means of bringing you together in such social communion that your lives may be better, happier and a greater spirit of charity, one for the other, exist among you. Your efforts to attain these ideals of life are commendable and can only be obtained in the highest sphere through organization.

"I have always believed in organization for without organization it would be difficult to accomplish much in a religious, agricultural or social way, but to make an organization successful and one of influence it must be composed of and guided by men and women who possess the best and broadest intellect and a high appreciation of their duty to their fellow man, so that they may intelligently, courageously and fearlessly meet the issues they are to confront.

"Realizing, as I know you do, that many members of the national Congress, as well as of the State legislative bodies, come from manufacturing, mining and commercial sections, and do not have a proper conception of the essential legislation to best conserve the farmers' welfare, it requires just such an organization as yours to disseminate the necessary information with respect to the great agricultural interests, so that all may understand and to the end that laws for the protection and benefit of the farmer may be enacted.

"it was primarily through your organization, more than any other influence, that the rural free delivery system was inaugurated and has reached a high standard of efficiency, also that laws were passed prohibiting the adulteration of dairy products. Your advocacy of the

VETERAN CLUB REUNION

Meeting at Grange Park Re-elects Judge Beaver President.

An interesting feature at Grange Park on Tuesday was the holding of the thirty-sixth annual reunion of the Centre County Veteran Club. There was a large attendance of veterans and a very delightful day was enjoyed by all. Isaac Frain delivered a very pleasing address of welcome, to which D. F. Fortney appropriately responded. During the day addresses were delivered by a number of well known men, including Captain George T. Michaels, of Lock Haven; Col. Grierson, of Jersey Shore and W. C. Heinle, of Bellefonte. The Executive Committee of the club was authorized to select the time and place for next year's reunion. The election of officers of the club for the coming year resulted as follows: Judge James A. Beaver, president; Colonel Austin Curtin and W. H. Fry, vice presidents, George M. Boal, treasurer; W. H. Musser, secretary. Col. Curtin was chosen a vice president to succeed the late W. C. Patterson, of State College.

Hospital Notes.

Mrs. Rebecca Welch, Mrs. Maude Coble, Mrs. Beckwith, Miss Ida Burris, Mrs. Mincemyer and Tom Thomas, of Bellefonte, and Jacob Jackson, of State College, were discharged as cured.

Robert Moyer, baggagemaster on the Lewisburg and Tyrone train, was thrown against a car window last Saturday forenoon, badly lacerating left palm of hand and wrist. He was taken to his home in Lewisburg on the afternoon train.

Miss Ruth Steward, of Altoona, entered the nurses training class.

Mrs. Ida Barner, of Hublersburg, admitted with typhoid fever.

A Necessary Change in Program.

By reason of the great inrush of students and the need of the presence of Dr. E. E. Sparks at the College on Friday evening, Dr. Sparks will speak in the afternoon at the dedication of the new High School building. The public will please note the change. The balance of the program will be as heretofore arranged and everybody is especially requested to hear Dr. Snedden in the evening. It is hoped there will be a large turnout both afternoon and evening.

Mystery Still Mystifes.

The mystery surrounding the damage recently done to the $600 electric clock in the New High School building has not been cleared up. The School Board, at a meeting on Monday evening, questioned several boys who were supposed to know more about the incident than they had revealed. All denied having started the ringing of the school bells on the night of the damage to the clock. The meeting was adjourned without having reached any satisfactory solution of the mystery.

Additional Primary Grade Room.

At Monday night's meeting of the School Board it was decided that an additional primary grade room would be necessary to care for the large number of scholars entering the Bellefonte public schools this year. An additional room will be provided for at the High School building. This will necessitate the employment of an additional teacher. The School Board voted to place $52,000 fire insurance on the new High School building and $5,000 additional on the furnishings.

Special Notice.

The attention of readers of "The Republican" is called to the fact that two Pennsylvania Railroad advertisements, in regard to rates of fare to the Blair County Fair at Hollidaysburg, appear in this issue of the paper. The duplication of the advertisements was due to a clerical error. We are directed by the Pennsylvania Railroad to announce that the advertisement appearing on Page 4 is official and asking that the advertisement on Page 7 be ignored.

Married at Hublersburg.

A pretty home wedding was that at Hublersburg, on Monday, last, the contracting parties being Miss Pearl Oneoda Hoy, of that place, and George Harry Wian, of Bellefonte. The ceremony was performed by Rev. H. I. Crow, pastor of the Hublersburg German Reformed church. The bride is a popular and accomplished young lady. Mr. Wian holds a responsible position with the railroad signal service, at Wilkinsburg, at which place the young couple will reside.

Academy Breaks Record.

The Bellefonte Academy opened for the winter on Tuesday, last. The number of boarding students enrolled is the largest in the history of the school.

MINGLES' NARROW ESCAPE AUTO TURNED TURTLE

Mr. Mingle and Misses Helen and Roxana Painfully Bruised.

CHILD HAS ARM BROKEN

Catherine Hoffer, Niece of Mr. Mingle, Only One of Party Seriously Injured—Mrs. Mingle Was Not in Car Which Upset Near Phila.

A. C. Mingle and daughters, Misses Helen and Roxana, of Bellefonte, had a narrow escape from serious injury and possibly death when their automobile turned turtle near Philadelphia, on Saturday night, last, imprisoning all of the party under the car. In the party was a one-year-old baby of Olie Hoffer, Mrs. Mingle's brother, and it was the child's cries that attracted attention and summoned help to the scene of the accident.

Catherine Hoffer, aged about 7 years, and a niece of Mr. Mingle, was the most seriously injured. She sustained a fractured arm and severe bruises about the body. The others in the party, while all more or less painfully bruised, escaped without broken bones. That they were not killed seems almost a miracle.

Mr. Mingle's only injury was a badly bruised noise, caused by his face colliding with the car when it turned over.

Miss Roxana Mingle was painfully bruised and badly scratched about the face.

Miss Helen Mingle was severely bruised. Her face is black and blue from bruises and one leg was painfully sprained. On Monday she could not walk without a limp, although the attending physicians said that the leg had not been seriously injured.

A son of Mr. Hoffer, who was also in the car, escaped without injury. The baby also escaped uninjured.

Mrs. Mingle was not in the car at the time of the accident. She did not learn of it until some time later that night. With Mr. Hoffer and Mrs. Hoffer she was in another automobile, which was traveling ahead and which had passed the scene of the accident several minutes earlier in the evening.

Mr. Mingle and his family are visiting the Hoffers, who live at Germantown, Philadelphia. On Saturday the Mingle and Hoffer families made up an automobile party for a trip to Valley Forge Park, which is located some distance from the city. They were returning from the park when the Mingle car went wrong. According to the Philadelphia newspapers the accident was caused by a tire blowing out, resulting in the machine turning completely upside down.

The accident happened on what is known as Argyle Road, a lonely spot near Ardmore, which is about nine miles from Philadelphia. The road in that section is quite dark. There was no warning of anything being wrong with the Mingle car until a loud report told that one of the front tires had blown out. In the next instant the car was upset and the occupants pinioned beneath the heavy mass of machinery.

While Mr. Mingle and his family have no definite plans for returning to Bellefonte, they are expected home probably tomorrow or Saturday.

STATE COLLEGE OPENS WITH 1600 STUDENTS

Enrollment Greatest in History of Splendid Institution.

550 TO 600 FRESHMEN

Lack of Railroad Facilities Causes Congestion and 300 Trunks, Massed in Mammoth Pile at Lemont, are Drenched by Rain.

State College opened for the winte yesterday with from between 1500 and 1600 students, the greatest number in the history of the institution. Last year the student body numbe.ed 1400. During the week there has been a rush of students for enrollment and it is expected that the Freshman class will total up somewhere between 550 and 600, as compared with 400 last year.

There is a corresponding increas? in the faculty, that for the present yea numbering 162.

The student body at State College now is representative of almost every nationality in the world. Two Chinese students are registered this year, the first Chinamen to enter State.

Another interesting feature is that this year witnesses the enrollment of probably fifty students from other colleges who have entered State for advanced work. This is also the greatest number of students of this class in the history of State College.

President Sparks was in complete charge, greeting the students, old and new, and directing affairs in general with his rare tact and executive ability. It is expected that before the end of the week work will be under way in every branch throughout the institution.

Lack of railroad facilities at State College resulted in a case of continuous congestion at Lemont when the students came in with a rush. Hundreds arrived by way of Bellefonte, while probably just as many more returned on the Lewisburg & Montandon road, leaving the trains at Lemont.

On Monday night 300 or more trunks belonging to students were massed in a mammoth pile at Lemont, owing to poor facilities for removing them to State College. During the night there was a heavy downpour of rain, drenching the trunks. The damage caused cannot be estimated until the trunks have been sorted out, placed in the rooms of the respective owners and opened.

That there is a crying need for a branch line of the Pennsylvania Railroad from Lemont to State College was never before so indelibly impressed on not only President Sparks and other officials but also on the student body. State College has had a wonderful growth in recent years. The building of a connecting link between Lemont and State College would contribute much to the future of the town and the institution. The Bellefonte Central Railroad was fully prepared for the rush of students and handled the increased traffic with comparative ease.

JOHN KINLEY TENER

Republican Nominee for Governor, who yesterday visited the Grangers Picnic, at Centre Hall.

DEATH OF MRS. JUDGE

Wife of Well Known Railroad Man Passes Away on Saturday.

Mrs. Mary Judge, wife of Dominique Judge, well known in railroad circles and a member of Bellefonte Council, died at her late home, in Thomas Street, on Saturday morning, last, after an extended illness. Funeral services were held on Tuesday morning, at St. John's Catholic church, at Bellefonte, the body then being taken to Tyrone, where interment was made.

One of those modest, retiring women who do a world of good unknown to others, Mrs. Judge was a splendid wife and mother and her death is mourned by a large circle of warm, admiring friends. A devout Christian woman, she was for years an active member of St. John's Catholic church.

Mrs. Judge had been a sufferer for a number of years. A cancerous growth foreshadowed the end and the fears of a kind and loving husband were more than confirmed when several months ago he was advised that her condition was such that she could not withstand an operation. Several weeks ago Mrs. Judge went to Philadelphia, but she was unable to find the relief for which she was so anxiously looking and finally a longing for her home and family prompted her to return. She gradually became weaker and on Saturday morning she passed away.

Surviving Mrs. Judge, who was 48 years of age, are a husband, who is one of the most efficient and trusted employees of the Bellefonte Central Railroad; one daughter, Mrs. George O. Gray, also of Bellefonte; a mother and one sister and one brother, the last named, Charles Smith, residing with his mother at Philipsburg.

She was born in New Brunswick, Me., October 5, 1831, and her maiden name was Mary Jane Hutchison. She is survived by the following children: W. A. Blair, Princeton, W. Va.; Mrs. S. M. Homer, Altoona; Mrs. B. F. Dickson and Mrs. C. Port, both of Tyrone. Philipsburg Journal.

REUBEN W. PRITCHARD.

Reuben W. Pritchard, a son of Mr. and Mrs. D. W. Pritchard, of Morrisdale, died on Saturday, last, in the Monongahela City hospital. His death was caused by typhoid fever, after a brief illness.

SUSPECTED OF TAKING DECEASED WIFE'S THINGS

Samuel H. Knepley, of Centre Hall, Issues Warrant for Mrs. Mushlaw.

RELEASED ON $300 BOND

Accused Stoutly Declare the Articles in Question were Received as Presents—Almost Collapse with Astonishment at Charge.

A most unusual case was that which had its climax on Monday, last, in the serving of a warrant on Mrs. Amahala Mushlaw and Mrs. Sarah J. Shirley, both of Jersey Shore, accused by Samuel H. Knepley, of Centre Hall, of having stolen a few articles of trifling value from his home. The articles in question belonged to Mrs. Mushlaw's deceased sister, Mrs. Knepley, who was buried on Saturday at Centre Hall. Mrs. Mushlaw and Mrs. Shirley visited Centre Hall to attend the funeral of the former's sister. When they alighted from the train at Bellefonte, enroute home to Jersey Shore, they were asked by Policeman Dukeman to accompany him t the office of District Attorney Runkle. To their amazement they learned that Mr. Knepley had charged them with theft. The astonishment of the two women was such that they could hardly believe their ears. Opening their dress-suit cases the women produced the articles and stoutly asserted that they had received them from Mr. Knepley. All told, the articles were worth probably $2.

District Attorney Runkle had a bond for $300 issued for the two women and they resumed their journey to Jersey Shore. No one who witnessed the amazement and indignation of the two women believed for a second that the charge against them would ever be brought to trial. Mrs. Mushlaw said that she accepted the things, not because they were worth anything but simply because they had once belonged to her deceased sister.

One of the articles supposed to have been stolen was a small jug, worth at most but a few cents. Mr. Knepley subsequently admitted that he had given that to Mrs. Mushlaw. Another article was a small quilt, worth perhaps 50 cents. A little boy with Mrs. Mushlaw said that the quilt had been given to him by Mr. Knepley. This the latter denied. The other articles included a small vase, a cream pitcher and a tray.

The story related by Mrs. Mushlaw added to the mystery surrounding Mr. Knepley's action. Mr. Knepley is a blacksmith and coachmaker at Centre Hall. On Wednesday of last week his aged wife died. Mrs. Mushlaw and Mrs. Shirley arranged to attend the funeral, which they understood was to have been held on Sunday. The funeral, however, was held on Saturday and when they arrived at Centre Hall it was to learn that Mrs. Knepley had been buried.

Mrs. Mushlaw and Mrs. Shirley remained over Sunday at the Knepley home. Mr. Knepley, they said, had accompanied them to the train and had said goodbye when they departed on Monday morning. The first they knew that any charge had been made against them, they explained, was when they got off the train at Bellefonte and were so informed by Chief of Police Dukeman.

The supposition is that Mr. Knepley will withdraw the charge, although he has not said what course he will pursue.

On both days meetings will be held at 1 o'clock P. M.

THE HOBBLE SKIRT

Fashion Circles in London Divided in Two Circles over Subject.

Fashion circles in Europe and America are now divided into two camps—those who regard the "hobble" skirt as imparting a grace to the woman's figure which no other form of dress has ever yet devised, and those who look on it with horror as rendering womanhood ridiculous and the slave of a fad which may even lead to physical injury.

Lady Duff-Gordon has decreed in the Daily Express the abolition of the "hobble," and she is a power in the fashions of two continents. Charles Kurzman, the New York modiste, flatly combats her and will fight with all his resources to maintain the supremacy of the "hobble" among fashionable people in New York throughout the winter.

Mr. Kurzman will have an ally on this side in Messrs. Selfridge, the manager of whose dress department told an Express representative yesterday that tight skirts are to be the prevailing fashion

"Though to my mind," he said, "the 'hobble' is not becoming to the French, American or German women on account of their broader hips, it adds grace and charm to the slimmer figure of the average English woman. Short people especially have welcomes for the new fashion because it undoubtedly has the appearance of increasing their height.

"Women are naturally anxious to look as becoming as possible, and any fashion which helps toward this is not likely to be suddenly discarded. As an instance I may mention hair pads. Women who formerly were compelled to wear their locks are greatly improved by the stylish coiffures which hair pads render possible. Hair pads thus remain, like the veil, a promanent feature of dress among many women.

"For the same reason the 'hobble' skirt, which greatly adds to the charm of so many women, is not likely to be suddenly discarded.

"When I speak of the 'hobble' skirt I do not mean the exaggerated 'hobble' which compels a woman to hop when she would like to rnn. Those are not worn by really fashionable people

"Here, for instance," the manager remarked, picking up a sample of the latest style, "is a skirt which measures about 1½ yards in circumference. That does not actually hinder walking, but it is probably 2 yards narrower than the old-fashioned skirts.

"From what I can see this modified 'hobble' is likely to rule the winter fashion."

Amid the clamor of the 'hobbleites" and the "antihobbleites" one voice remains silent. An Express representative who endeavored to obtain from Messrs. Paquin the secret of their new winter design in skirts was received with almost open-mouthed astonishment.

"Not a word can be said," the manager replied, "before September 15. It is a secret until then."

Mme. Paquin, he admitted cautiously, was engaged on models at the present moment, but what was the probable outcome he refused to say.

One humorous critic of the "hobble" declares that the effect is to give women two waists, one in the usual place and the other round the knee.

A Common Sense Argument.

No doubt some people think newspaper men are persistent dunners. Let a farmer place himself in a similar position and see if he would not do the same. Suppose that he raises a thousand bushels of wheat, and his neighbors should come and buy and the price was one dollar or less, and say "I will pay the amount in a few days." As the farmer does not want to be small about the matter, he says, "All right." Another comes the same way, and another, until the whole thousand bushels of wheat is trusted to a thousand different people and no one of the different persons concerns himself about it, for it is a small amount they owe the farmer and of course that will not help him any. He does not realize that the farmer has fritted away his entire crop of wheat and that its value is due in a thousand little driblets, and that he is seriously embarassed in his business, because his debtors treat it as a little matter. But if all would pay him promptly, which they should as well as not, it would be a large sum to the farmer and enable him to carry on his business without difficulty. So it is with the publisher. Centre Hall Reporter.

Mr. Tener's First Speech.

At his home, at Charelroi, on Saturday, last, John K. Tener, the Republican nominee for Governor, was accorded an ovation by his home friends, the people who live with him and know him best. Upward of 50,000 persons from the western end of the State were present to do him honor. It was, perhaps, the most remarkable public demonstration in honor of a young man witnessed in this or any other State in recent years.

Responding to the demonstration in his honor, Mr. Tener made a speech. It was a plain talk by a home man to his home friends. We hope it will be carefully read by every subscriber of "The Republican." It reveals, far better than could any aulogy, the type of man who has been nominated for Governor on the Republican ticket. This is what Mr. Tener had to say:

No one appreciates more than I that the people of Pennsylvania should be informed at this time of my views on certain important issues, but could you, my friends, who have assembled here from distant parts of the State to participate in the opening of the campaign in the interests of the great Republican party, but understand, as I do, the character of the demonstration you have witnessed today, you would, as I shall, refuse to discuss politics to any extent in this presence tonight.

True, this is a political meeting as you from afar see it, but as already has been stated by your worthy chairman and as I have been otherwise advised, it is a tribute from the good people of this community and an event, the success of which my neighbors have for some weeks past been faithfully and energetically laboring.

Among those who have greeted you today in a welcome to our prosperous town, are many who still cling to political principles other than those advocated by the great Republican party. These friends have been my associates and confidants; they are conversant with my views on State and national affairs. They are familiar with my social, business and public life, and I regard their continued friendship as a priceless possession; hence an attempt on my part to evangelize the cause of Republicanism now, would be but poor compensation for their efforts in making this, the opening of our campaign, the great success it is. However, this does not bar me from expressing the hope that they may learn from the words of wisdom by the other speakers.

My declination to discuss before you State questions, party measures or party principles, must not be construed as an attempt to evade a responsibility or a refusal to subscribe to the tenets of our platform, and while I withhold that expression tonight, I shall to the people of Pennsylvania to know that at our next meeting and during the campaign I shall not hesitate to clearly d fine my views on all important issues.

When one becomes a candidate for office, he also becomes a target for criticism, just nd unjust, and is likely to become the victim of canards and villifying statements from a disgruntled element, as manifested in the campaign four years ago. Today too much cannot be said in commendation of the splendid administration of Governor Stuart, now drawing to a close. Attacks were made upon him during his campaign and he was characterized as weak and a tool, yet after his election and during the administration of the duties of his high office, he met every emergency as it arose and handled it without fear or favor. Even now with the campaign hardly begun, slanders are abroad, yet profiting by the example before me, I will meet their charges fearlessly and honestly, and the people by their votes shall be the judges.

Now let me speak to you, my neighbors, in a closer and perhaps a more personal vein, and I am glad to have the opportunity to give this accounting in the presence of so many of my constituents.

During the first and special session of the Sixty-first Congress, consideration was principally given to a revision of the tariff, and to the end that, in my opinion, the best law, taken as a whole, in the joint interest of the producer, consumers and manufacturer, was enacted, and as clearly demonstrated by the results under the Payne bill now in operation nearly fourteen months. During this time the country has prospered and a Treasury deficit of some sixty-seven millions in March, 1909, has now been turned to a surplus.

At the following, or first regular session, much advance legislation was enacted. A river and harbor bill, providing especially for the construction of a comprehensive system of inland waterways, east and west of the great Mississippi was passed, and the Government today stands committed to carry forward and wholly complete these improvements within a given time, and it is of special interest and advantage to western Pennsylvania and this district that work under provisions of this bill has already begun, which, when completed in twelve years, will provide a nine-foot stage of water every day in the year from Pittsburg to Cairo.

A postal saving bank bill was also passed, pledging the credit of the Government to return, with 2 per cent. interest, deposits of individuals made with the Post Office Department. Two new States were added to the Union, making forty-eight in all, while a public land and a conservation measure was also enacted. Increased powers were given to the Interstate Commerce Commission, further protecting the small and independent shippers. A Commerce Court was created, as well as a court to act without delay on injunction, and these, together with other needful laws in the interests of the people generally, received my unqualified support.

In the performance of every duty which devolved upon me as your Representative. I have tried during the short time it was given me to measure up to what you might reasonably expect of your Congressman. Whether I have met the expectations I know not, but I do know that in my efforts for my district I have honestly given to your service the best that was in me, and tonight with a clear conscience and clean hands I return to you the trust that is mine.

If it be the will of the people of Pennsylvania that I be chosen their Chief executive and if in the performance of the manifold duties of that high office, my acts shall receive the commendation of my neighbors, then indeed will I be satisfied.

A Dreadful Experience.

My name is Florentia Flamenta Farraday. People call me a doll. I have my own ideas about what I ought to be called, but I will not express them. I wish to tell what happened to me one morning.

My dear young Mamma, Florence, had dressed me in the most beautiful pink satin gown I have ever seen, had placed me in the corner of the sofa, and was kneeling before me, looking at me with love and admiration, when suddenly we heard her Uncle George's voice in the hall. "Florence," he cried, "come fishing with me." Instantly mama sprang to her feet and started toward the door, then, as if suddenly remembering me, ran back and caught me up in her arms. In a few moments we were all three, Mr. George Curtis, mama, and I, walking through the woods, but Mr. Curtis made me extremely uncomfortable. He spoke of my "gorgeous attire," he said he had never before been fishing with such a "resplendent being," and although I did not understand his words I felt sure he was making fun of me. When mama, told him my name, he stopped short and laughed as if he would hurt himself. When we reached the brook where he was to fish, he said: "Now we must find a suitable place for this royal personage, for I am sure she is a princess in disguise." Then he arranged a seat for me, and I will say he did it gently and kindly, but he was laughing all the time. Well, he soon became interested in his stupid fishing rod, and mama was watching so intently to see if he "got a bite" that she forgot all about me.

Suddenly I felt something strange against my cheek, an ugly grunt sounded in my ear, and there right beside me stood a nasty hog. Before Mr. Curtis or mama noticed him he poked his snout under the stone on which I sat, it rolled over, and I was pitched headlong into the water.

To this day I do not know whether the fright gave me the power of speech or not, but I think I must have screamed, for I had no sooner touched the water when I heard an awful shriek, a splash, and there beside me in the stream was my mama. Then there was a shout and another splash, and Mr. Curtis was in the stream also. In a moment he had mama in his arms, and had landed her safely on the bank, but I was left floating down stream.

"What possessed you?" I heard him say to mama. "The water is deep enough to drown you."

"Uncle, uncle!" she cried, "Florentia, see Florentia, she is being carried down the stream!"

"Now," I thought, "of course he will jump into the water and rescue me." But no he run along the bank and fished me up on the end of his fishing rod!

"Her royal highness is much bedraggled," he said, "but her life is saved, and I don't think her beauty is spoiled. But run home, Florence, as fast as you can, and change your clothes. I wil carry the princess.

And he did. Carried me home tucked under his arm with my head hanging downwards. I have never forgiven him. —Philadelphia Times.

In the Automobile Ward.

F. H. Elliott, secretary of the American Automobile Association, was discussing at a dinner in New York the automobilist's well-known enthusiasm.

"A friend of mine," he said, "visited recently the automobile ward of a lunatic asylum. They have, you know, automobile wards now.

"It was a large, airy room, and along the wall were arranged some two dozen cots; but of the inmates not a trace was to be seen

"But where are the inmates?" my friend asked the physician.

"The inmates?" was the reply. 'Oh, they're all here They're under the beds tinkering with the springs."—Washington Star.

GREEN CORN

Some Excellent Ways to Prepare it For the Table.

Fried Corn—Take some tender green corn—a dozen ears will not be too many for a family of four or five—scrape carefully from the cob. Let the corn be cut through the centre of the kernal, so that the pulp and juices may be extracted without the removal of any of the hulls. Over the corn a very little flour should then be sifted, with salt and pepper to taste. In the meantime let some slices of fat bacon be placed over the fire in a frying pay, to remain until all the grease has been extracted. When this has been done the meat should be removed and the corn put into the pan to fry in the bacon fat until it has become deliciously brown and tender, but it must be stirred almost constantly during the fifteen or twenty minutes that it will take to cook it. If not, it will burn.

For a substantial soup at dinner, or as a luncheon dish, a sweet corn chowder is sure to give satisfaction. To prepare it first cut some fat salt pork into cubes and fry them in a saucepan. Fry some sliced onions in this fat until they have attained a distinct yellow hue; then add some raw potatoes that have previously been sliced and cut into dice, the corn that has been scraped from a dozen ears, about a pint of boiling water and pepper and salt as required. Let this mixture simmer until the potatoes are tender, for by this time the corn will have cooked about enough. Then add a pint of scalded milk that has already been thickened by the addition of a tablespoonful of butter rubbed into two tablespoonfuls of flour. Simmer for another five minutes; then add hard crackers—"pilot bread"—and serve.

Corn Chowder.—Is one of the favorite hot-weather soups among the Creole families in New Orleans. Why it should so seldom be used in the North is one of those culinary mysteries that it is difficult to fathom. In making it, the corn is scraped from the cob, after which the cobs themselves are put into four quarts of boiling water and left until the water has been reduced to about three quarts. Then they are removed and the corn is substituted. This cooks for about half an hour, or longer if it is not soft enough to be pressed through a sieve. After being strained, it is seasoned liberally with salt and pepper. Three tablespoonfuls of butter that have already been rubbed into two tablespoonfuls of flour follow, and, when the soup begins to thicken, with almost constant stirring, a pint of boiling milk or cream, is added. When cooked a few minutes longer it is removed from the fire, and the beaten yolks of two eggs give the finishing touch to a delicious soup.

Next to the genuine clam fritters, properly made corn fritters are about as appetizing an entree as can be set before a hungry man. To make them remove the corn as directed, then beat up an egg, adding the pulp and juice of the corn by degrees, but beating all the time. When the blend has been completed, add a tablespoonful of melted butter, stir in a gill of milk, a little pepper and salt, and, finally, enough flour to thicken the mixture sufficiently to make it fryable. In the meantime, melt some lard in an iron frying kettle, and, when it has become thoroughly hot, drop the batter into it from a large kitchen spoon. Then serve the fritters as hot as possible.—Philadelphia Record.

A Modern Newspaper.

There are three essential elements, according to "The Philadelphia Record," that make for success in a modern newspaper: First, it must print all the news, with an eye to the interests of all types of readers, in attractive and entertaining form. Second, whatever political cause it may editorially espouse, it must be fair, free of outside dictation, and sincere in advocating the policies it believes to be best for the general welfare. Third, it must be clean, wholesome and elevating in its influence.

"The Record" itself possesees all these elements of success, and then some. Independently Democratic in politics, it is as nearly nonpartisan as a newspaper can be in its news columns, which fully and accurately cover the entire field tributary to Philadelphia. Aside from its news departments, including its daily market reports, which are the recognized authority in produce transactions, it is pre-eminent in several other features that have contributed immensely to its popularity as a family newspaper. The last word on household affairs, science, fashions and farm progress is found in its regular departments. Its famous "Reporters' Nosegay" column is widely quoted throughout the country. It is the leader in the field of sports. It is practically the only daily paper in the East for horse news. And its cartoonist, who hits off the principal events of the day in inimitable style, is second to none in the United States.

"The Philadelphia Record" has another element of news value that is of particular interest to the women of the family. The store news is generally of secondary importance in their eyes only to the chronicle of the world's doings. "The Record," it is worth noting, prints more department store advertising than any other in Philadelphia.

September at the Seashore

REDUCED FARES ACCOUNT G. A. R. ENCAMPMENT.

The rolling ocean with its boundless prospect is ever interesting; but at no time is it more enticing than during the month of September. The bathing is at its best. The sailing is ideal. The salt sea air is charged with increased invigoration, and there is a geniality about it unknown during the torrid days of summer.

Atlantic City, Ocean City, Sea Isle City, Avalon, Stone Harbor, Anglesea, Wildwood, Holly Beach, Wildwood Crest, and Cape May are all prepared to entertain with exceptional hospitality all guests who may come. The hotels are less crowded and more comfortable; the service is better, and in most instances the rates are lower.

The train service of the Pennsylvania Railroad to all these resorts will be found convenient and comprehensive.

Excursion tickets to Atlantic City will be sold at reduced fares on September 16, 17, 18, 19, and 20, on account of the G. A. R. National Encampment, good returning to reach original starting point not later than September 28. For stop-over priyileges and extension of return limit, to October 28, consult Ticket Agents.

Unusual enjoyment awaits the September sojourner by the sea.

Over 700 Wives.

Abdul Hamid'a wives continue to be a source of perplexity to the Turkish Government. Their number was estimated not to exceed 200, including female slaves of all ranks, but the minister of finance found itself confronted by claims from 746 women who demanded from the ex-sultan's successor compensation to the tune of $800,000. The government refused to pay this sum, but proposed that the Chamber should sanction an arrangement by which the women of the harem for a period of ten years should receive monthly pensions ranging from $4.25 to $21.15, which even in frugal Turkey is a pretty meager subsistence. The Turkish deputies, however, still thought the ministry overgenerous. Some of the extreme left shouted: "Why don't you get them married off?" whereupon the finance minister retorted that the women were lone and homeless widows, and according to Turkish custom could not expect to attract husbands among the faithful. Other deputies suggested that as the women came mostly from Asia Minor or Albania they should be sent back to their native provinces to be cared for locally. Here the members for the province concerned pointed out indignantly that the families of these women had received "good money" for them by selling them to Yildez Klosk, and that the local authorities could not now be expected to provide for their maintenance.

Too Particular Ranchman.

A Montana ranchman, who lays modest claim to being the homeliest man in his state, has written a letter to the mayor of St. Louis asking that his honor pick him out a wife. Now one would not suppose that the homeliest man in Montana would place any restrictions or file any specifications, but this chap does. One of the requirement is difficult, and to qualify for the position of better-half to this breaker of bronchos and puncher of cattle a woman must be active, quick of eye and exceedingly rapid of movement. While she must be a blue-eyed blonde, be able to cook and ride a horse, she must also be able to catch bunkhouse fleas. There's the rub, or rather the bite. Any woman who is quick enough to catch bunkhouse fleas is not going to waste her time with the homeliest man in Montana monkeying around a measly old shack in the wilds of the cow country. She is already in some big city keeping the police busy. Jack Robinson of Hunter's Hot Springs, Mont., is too particular. If he were to amend his application by striking out the flea proposition, he might be successful. Pittsburg Sun.

BERRY'S BREAK BURSTS HIS BOOM

Candidate's Crazy Talk Startled the Commonwealth.

REFORMERS REPUDIATE HIM

Indorsement of Democrats For Congress Too Much For Independent Republicans to Stand.

[Special Correspondence.]

Philadelphia, Sept. 13.

Everything everywhere in the political situation in Pennsylvania presages a phenomenal Republican victory in November.

Not only are the Republicans united harmonious and aggressive, but their old time opponents, the Democrats, are hopelessly divided and demoralized.

The nomination of John Kinley Tener by the Republican convention for the governorship, by a unanimous vote and with every unsuccessful candidate promptly and sincerely pledging fealty to the nominee, has been followed by evidence of a practical and indubitable character of earnest and enthusiastic support of the ticket from the great body of the Republican voters of the commonwealth.

Fresh from an atmosphere of neighborly good will, Mr. Tener came east and quickly found that while he is not personally as well known here, the story of his career, of his manly qualities and his sturdy character, had already impressed the voters and guaranteed him a cordial welcome. Following a flattering reception at a big meeting of farmers of Bucks and Montgomery counties, Mr. Tener was the central figure at an immense popular picnic given on the outskirts of this city under the auspices of the active Republicans of northeastern Philadelphia. Nearly fifty thousand persons, men, women and children, participated in this wonderful outing.

Republican success in Pennsylvania has always been certain when the party organizations in the counties of Allegheny and Philadelphia have been united and harmonious. The majorities that will be given to Mr. Tener and his colleagues in Philadelphia and Pittsburg this year, it is predicted, will be undoubtedly large.

And the same reports come from practically all of the interior counties.

A Divided Democracy.

What a spectacle is presented by the Democracy of Pennsylvania!

Grim Democrats and Berry Democrats are at each others' throats every hour.

While present indications give Grim an advantage in that he has the regular Democratic organization in virtually every county in his favor, and that with two or three exceptions the Democratic nawspapers of the state are supporting him, the Bryanite faction is keeping up a sharp fire of denunciation, not only of Grim, but the leaders responsible for his nomination.

Berry, himself, seems to have lost his head. He has been badly rattled over the many setbacks his candidacy has received. He is irritable and fretful and has made an exhibition of himself upon several occasions during the last week.

The most sensational break he has made was his violent and unwarranted attack upon the newspapers of Pennsylvania in a speech at a farmers' picnic at Chestnut Hill.

Manifestly without preparation, and with a display of anger that startled and astonished his audience, Berry launched a tirade of abuse upon the reporters, whom he dubbed "newspaper snipes," and declared that they should "be burned at the stake." In the same outburst of temper Berry arraigned the Democratic leaders who refused to favor his nomination.

"That bunch at Allentown," he shouted, "thought I would lie down. But I am just beginnig and I want stop until I have them behind the bars."

Berry's attack upon the newspapers he admitted was b cause of the publication of the fac. that he borrowed $15,000 from Guffey, the Democratic boss, upon a note for the payment of which Be[illegible] now being sued.

The disastrous effect upon the Berry campaign of this crazy talk of the candidate was at once apparent to everybody identified with the bolter's outfit.

The endorsement by the Keystone Party of many Democrats for congress has lost Berry thousands of votes.

None of the substantial men who have figured as leaders in reform movements in Philadelphia have allowed their names to be connected with the Berry candidacy, and while there are many reasons why intelligent Republicans should not vote the Berry ticket, admitedly the most potent cause for hostility to this combination is found in the alliance with Democratic aspirants for seats in congress.

Where America Leads.

Robert Herrick, an author, praised in an after-dinner speech in Chicago the philanthrophy of the American millionaire.

"Our millionaires, with all their faults," he said, "are in their charities he most liberal men in the world. We should be glad that no American fashionable preacher can say of his rich parishioners what I once heard a London fashionable preacher say from the pulpit very bitterly.

"Our upper classes," the preacher sneered, 'don't give according to their means but according to their meanness.'"

Court Proclamation!

Whereas the Honorable Ellis L. Orvis, President Judge of the Court of Common Pleas of the 49th. Judicial District, consisting of the county of Centre, having issued his precept, bearing date the 1st. day of August, 1910, to me directed for holding in Court of Common Pleas, Orphans' Court, Court of Quarter Sessions of the Peace, Oyer and Terminer and General Jail Delivery, in Bellefonte, for the county of Centre, and to commence on the being the 26th. day of September, 1910, and to continue two weeks.

NOTICE is hereby given to the Coroner, Justices of the Peace, Aldermen and Constables of said county of Centre, that they be then and there in their proper persons at 10 o'clock in the forenoon of the 26th., with their records, inquisitions, examinations and their own remembrances, to do those things which to their office appertains to be done, and those who are bound in recognizances, to prosecute against the prisoners that are or shall be in the jail of Centre county, be then and there to prosecute against them as shall be just.

Mr. Grim's Blunder.

When the Hon. Webster Grim, Democratic nominee for Governor, publicly sneered at the work of the State Health Department, he just as publicly confessed to his inability to size up to the standard of man needed to fill the office of Governor. If there is any branch of the State government that is thoroughly honest and efficient it is the Department of Health. If there is one branch of the State government that is doing a splendid work for the people of Pennsylvania it is the Department of Health. If there is one branch of the State government that should be praised and not sneered at it is the Department of Health.

Mr. Grim, when he sneers at the Department of Health, insults the people of Pennsylvania. He injures, not the Department of Health, but himself. He accentuates the absurdity of his sneering criticism by turning completely about and saying that he didn't intend saying so much as he did say.

At the head of the Department of Health stands Dr. Samuel G. Dixon, one of the finest men who has figured in public life, in this or any other State, in the memory of the present generation. Clean, religiously honest, manly and honorable to a pronounced degree, he stands without a peer at Harrisburg. His efficiency, his thorough and broad grasp of the work in hand, is conceded by even such critics as Mr. Grim. Dr. Dixon, as head of the Department of Health, knows no politics, knows no friends, no foes—knows simply that he has a duty to perform and that that duty is safeguarding the health of the people of this great State. He has performed that duty and performed it well. His work has more than met the expectations of the public and the demands of the most unreasonable critic.

It may not be known or appreciated by the people just what tremendous power is vested in the State Commissioner of Health. In a word, that power is second only to the power given to the Governor. Placed in unworthy hands, that power would be a menace to the public. At it is, the power vested in Dr. Dixon has aided him in improving conditions and protecting human life throughout the State.

Dr. Dixon's work is so indelibly stamped upon the public mind that he need have no concern over harping criticism, whether that criticism be inspired by ignorance or by a mania for office. In this day and generation of muckraking, slandering of public officials and yellow journalism, there are few men in public life who have escaped so much as the faintest suspicion of mismanagement or wrongdoing. Dr. Dixon is one of these few. On no occasion has there ever been so much as a whisper that anything in his department, no matter how remote, was tainted by suspicion.

Governor Pennypacker appointed Dr. Dixon as State Commissioner of Health. One of the very best acts of Governor Stuart's administration was his reappointment of Dr. Dixon. When Mr. Tener assumes charge at Harrisburg, as governor, he could do nothing that would place him higher in the esteem of the public than to follow the example of his two immediate predecessors and name Dr. Dixon as chief of the Department of Health.

A Splendid Selection.

According to Harrisburg dispatches, Auditor General Young has concluded to tender Gabriel H. Moyer, of Lebanon County, the very responsible post of Deputy Auditor General. We sincerely trust that this is true. A brilliant lawyer, an eloquent speaker and a man, through and through, Mr. Moyer is eminently qualified for the place. Mr. Moyer is young, energetic, able and a fair sample of what the American boy may accomplish if he is determined to win. By his own effort he has established for himself a proud place in the legal profession. In his brief career in public life he has stamped his individuality upon the public in a manner that has won universal commendation and given him prominence in every section of the State. Auditor General Young's selection is a splendid one. It will at once meet with public approval and insure a continuance of the high standard of that branch of the State government.

FIRE DRILL FOR PUPILS AT NEW HIGH SCHOOL

Expect to Inaugurate Plan Within Next Few Weeks.

NOON HOUR MARCH

Scholars Assemble in Corridors and Parade Out of Building to Tap of Drum—Preliminary Step to Safeguarding Life in Case of Fire.

A fire drill for the protection of the several hundred children attending public school at the new High School building has been planned by Professor Jonas E. Wagner and will be put into operation within the next few weeks.

A similar drill to safeguard the lives of children in the event of fire cannot be adopted at the old High School building owing to the absence in that structure of a large main corridor such as is found in the new building. It is possible, however, that some plan will be adopted to conform to the several stairways and entrances at the old building.

At the new High School building, however, large corridors, running the full length of the building on each floor, make the introduction of a general fire drill comparatively simple. When once under way and thoroughly understood by the students, it is expected that the system will make it possible to empty the entire building in a very few minutes.

What might be termed a preliminary step toward the adoption of the fire drill at the new High School building is the noon hour marching of pupils out of the building. At the noon hour all of the pupils, from those in the High School grade down to the smallest child in the primary rooms, assemble in the large corridors and, keeping step to a drum, played by one of the pupils, march out of the building into Allegheny Street. The drill was first tried during the latter part of last week and at once met with favor among the pupils. Owing to the fact that all of the scholars do not finish their studies at the same hour in the afternoon marching out of the building at the close of the day is not attempted.

building of good roads has produced splendid results and created a strong demand for further improvements in that direction. The suggestion of this and other needful legislation, including postal saving banks, has had its birth in your good organization.

"President Taft's administration is committed to the practice of judicious economies in all departments of the government, yet recognizing the needs for a further extension of the rural delivery the appropriation for this extension was the only item increased in the Post Office appropriation bill, and I am glad to say this measure received my earnest support.

"In the enactment and enforcement of laws for the prevention of adulteration of dairy products and in the protection of health the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania leads all other States. In the appropriation for public school purposes we hold first place, and I am in favor of such an educational code as will give Pennsylvania the very best schools and the very best school system in the world. Much of the credit in educational matters is due to the farmer; for whereever we go we find the country school houses dotting the valleys and decorating the hillsides in the remotest corners of our state. Not only do we find the small and modest school houses in the agricultural districts but very often the more pretentious homes of learning as evidenced by your splendid State College, located in this rich and prosperous community, where are housed and educated many of the young men and women from the great Monongahela Valley, where I reside, and if I am elected Governor I will lend my efforts to secure for every boy and every girl in Pennsylvania the very best education possible, as well as to urge the adoption of a comprehensive system of road improvement to the end that our roads may be made at the earliest date passable twelve months in the year.

"Notwithstanding unjust attacks and unwarranted criticism our Department of Health has attained such a high standard of efficiency as to not only elicit the commendation of our intelligent citizenship but compel as well the admiration of every State in the Union. If I am elected chief executive of this great Commonwealth I shall continue the good work of the Department of Health under the supervision of Dr. Dixon."

Mr. Reynolds and Mr. Shaner also spoke, the former commending the farmers for organizing and expressing the belief that by means of granges much needed legislation had been and would be secured.

At the conclusion of the meeting Mr. Tener and his party were taken to State College in automobiles. It was Mr. Tener's first visit to that great institution and he was greatly pleased with the trip. The party returned to Bellefonte shortly after 4 o'clock and departed on the 4.40 train for Tyrone, enroute to Philadelphia, from which place they today go to Pottsville for the annual convention of the State League of Republican Clubs.

Delightful weather contributed much to the success of this year's picnic at Grange Park, which formally opened on Saturday last and was under full swing on Monday. Every one of the 150 tents has been occupied during the week, the first instance in the history of these annual outings that all of the tents have been filled. The exhibition of live stock and farm impliments is much above that of recent years, the several entertainment features have been exceptionally good and all in all the big event has been a splendid success.

Dr. John Twitmyer, of Sharpville, Pa., is visiting his sister, Mrs. Samuel Decker on Spring Street. He is just returning home after a three months trip abroad. While away he was accompanied by his brother, Professor Edwin Twitmyer, of Washington State. Both are old Centre County boys, having been born and raised at Zion.

We feel that we are indebted to Mrs. Henry Steinkirchner, of Newton, Kansas, who in sending us a money order advancing the date on her copy of "The Republican", said some very nice things about this newspaper. Mrs. Steinkirchner simply said that she couldn't get along without "The Republican." It is our aim to make the paper so interesting and keep it so interesting that every subscriber will feel, just as does Mrs. Steinkirchner, that they cannot get along without it.

One would naturally suppose that Hon. Leonard Rhone would be so busy this week managing the big grangers picnic that he would not be able to find time for anything else. A day or two ago we received a letter from him and, of course, assumed that it contained some sort of notice in regard to the picnic plans, so imagine our delightful surprise on opening it to discover a nice check, advancing the date on his copy of "The Republican." It once more reminded us of the old saying that the successful man is never too busy to attend to little things.

A jolly visitor to "The Republican" office on Tuesday was Martin Luther Miller, of Penna. Furnace, ones of the boys who wore the blue in the days of the Civil war and of whose services Centre County is justly proud. Mr. Miller last week attended the Grand Army reunion in Altoona, being the guest of M. W. Crayne, an uncle, who is a building inspector at that place. Like many other old soldiers Mr. Miller is looking forward to the trip to Gettysburg for the great dedication next month. He was one of the Centre County boys who rendered noble service at Gettysburg and is thus entitled to free transportation to and from that place on the occasion of the dedication of the Pennsylvania monument. Mr. Miller served in Company F, 147th Regiment, Twelfth Corps, White Star Division, Slocum's command, at Kulp's Hill. A brother, William Miller, resides at Hazelton and is one of the leading business men of that place. While in town Mr. Miller became enrolled as a subscriber to "The Republican," thus making sure that he will receive all the Centre County news during the year to come.

Have You Seen Them?

Once in a while Landlord Daggett, of the Bush House, springs something new on his staff of porters and bellboys. This week he had them appear in fine, new blue uniforms, with gold braid on the sleeves and down the pant leg, in military fashion. George Freeman says that the uniforms are the swellest things this side of the land of the golden stairs. Said George: "General Grant may have looked pretty fine, but, oh, you new uniforms."

Recent Deaths.

AMANDA WALKER.

Amanda, relict of the late William Walker, died on Sunday evening, at 10 o'clock, from cancerous trouble, with which she had been a sufferer for a number of years. More than a year ago she underwent an operation in the Bellefonte hospital that prolonged her life, although by her friends it was realized that it was but a matter of a short time until she would pass away. During the last fourteen years she resided at Boalsburg. On Wednesday of last week she became seriously ill and was moved to the home of her brother, Jacob Meyers, where she died. Deceased was born January 27, 1849. She was the youngest daughter of the late Henry and Catherine Meyers, early settlers. Surviving are Henry Meyers, of Bowling Green, Virginia; Mrs. A. W. Dale, of Oak Hall; P. H. Meyers, of Centre Hall, and Jacob, at the old homestead. She was a splendid woman and a devout member of the Reformed church, for years being a member of the choir. Burial was made on Monday afternoon, at 2 o'clock, at Boalsburg, Rev. Mr. Geiss officiating.

MRS. SARAH HEVERLY.

Mrs. Sarah Heverly, widow of John Heverly, died at her home in Howard last Thursday afternoon after a lingering illness with cancer. Deceased was aged about 65 years and was a daughter of the late David and Christina Bechdel, well known residents of Liberty township. Mrs. Heverly was a member of the Christian church and the funeral was held Saturday afternoon, services being conducted by her pastor Rev. W. H. Patterson. The deceased is survived by the following children: Frank, of St. Louis, Mo.; John, of Clearfield; Harry, of Johnsonburg; Hensyl, of Buffalo, and Miss Minnie, of Howard. Two sisters, Mrs. Levi Rupert, of Beech Creek, and Mrs. Nathan James, of Liberty township, and one brother, Thomas Bechdel, of Cairo, Ill., also survive.

MICHAEL CONFER.

Michael Confer, one of Howard's aged citizens and a lifelong resident of that community, died at his home there last Thursday morning of infirmities incident to old age. Mr. Confer was one of the township's progressive farmers and served a number of terms as township road supervisor, doing much to improve the public roads in the way of grades and surfacing. Burial was made Saturday forenoon in the Schenck cemetery, services being conducted by Rev. E. F. Faust of the Reformed church. The deceased was aged about 80 years. He is survived by his wife, three sons and three daughters, as follows; Henry, Robert, and Edward Confer, Mrs. Clemmit Gardner, Mrs. Parker Thompson, and Mrs. Lott Neff, all of Howard.

Coon Was a Porcupine.

Earl Baker, Henry Lewis and Tom Norris, three of the city's embryo Nimrods, had an exciting experience on Friday night just above Logan's orchard on the Warm Springs road when they had a tussel with a porcupine and as a result one dog is likely to die, another is suffering severe agony from quills that the animal used in his defense.

The boys went out coon hunting and above the orchard, Norris got up a tree with the intention of shaking down the animal that they thought was their game. Just about the time he started out the limb, Baker and Lewis on the ground, saw that instead of a coon they had a big 20 pound porcupine cornered and told Norris to stay where he was.

The porcupine assumed offensive tactics tho and started in the limb after Norris and if two rifle shots from Baker and two loads from a shot-gun in the hands of Lewis had not knocked him off the branch, Norris would have been much stuck up. Lewis and Baker each had their dog with them and when the animal dropped to the ground they both made a plunge for it. The result was that the sharp pointed quills simply covered their head and one dog got two in his mouth. Baker got all the quills out of his dog but the other one is in a bad way. The boys killed the animal and are showing the quills as proof of their story.—Huntingdon Era.

DO YOU WANT $10?

If So, Just Take Ticket No. 1340 to Knisely's Cigar Store.

There's a $10 gold piece in Bellefonte hunting an owner. The glittering coin reposes in a box in a cigar case just a few inches inside the door at Knisely's popular cigar store and billiard emporium. Hundreds have looked longingly at it in the last few days but thus far the rightful owner has failed to show up and produce a small piece of common cardboard bearing the number "1340."

The $10 gold piece was chanced off at a benefit entertainment at the Scenic last week. The proceeds of the ticket-selling contest will be devoted to paying off the debt of the Bellefonte baseball club. When the lucky number was announced there was a hurried search of pockets, pocketbooks, wallets, etc. Every fellow felt sure he had the winning number, but nobody could find the all-important coupon to prove it. The next day the $10, still hunting an owner, was taken to Knisely's cigar store. There it has since remained.

Its a safe bet that this is the only $10 in Bellefonte that is lying about loose and simply begging for somebody to take it away.

Unclaimed Letters.

The following letters remain unclaimed in the Bellefonte post office for the last week: Mrs. Sara Gardner, Rosa Rogers, Kersey Showers, Thomas Thompson; foreign, Bernandino Petrica. Persons calling for these letters will kindly explain that the same have been advertised in "The Republican."

THE SMALL DEPOSITOR.

Thirty years ago anyone with a bank account who paid his bills by check, was, as a rule, a man of substance if not of fortune. His check book was regarded as a symbol of wealth and made him superior, financially, to his fellows. He was then truly one man in a hundred. Now it is no longer necessary to be rich or well to do to have a running bank account. Banks welcome the small depositor, and guard his interests as carefully as those of his rich neighbor. The times truly change.

"BACK TO THE FARM"

IX.—The City Man as a Farmer.

By C. V. GREGORY.

[Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.]

THE "back to the land" movement is not confined merely to keeping the people on the farms who are already there, although this is the most important part of the problem. The boys and girls born and reared in the country have a better appreciation of its problems and its possibilities than a city bred man or woman could ever have. Yet there are many country boys born with a taste for machinery that nothing but a factory can ever satisfy. There are many born with the ability to handle men that might make them the head of a great mercantile establishment. The city needs men of this kind, and the country can well afford to spare them, for it is for the good of the nation that they should go.

At the same time there are many city born boys and girls to whom the air of the crowded streets seems stifling. They love the country, and they belong there. There are others who through no fault of their own have never been able to get higher than the first round of the ladder. The fierce competition for places has left them well nigh stranded. With them it is a question of staying in the city at a pittance that scarcely suffices to maintain life in decency or of going to the country and making a comfortable living.

The fable of the daisy who tried to change places with the rose is often quoted to discourage such people from casting their fortunes in with the country. The cases where the city man and his family have been successfully transplanted to the country are too numerous to warrant the assumption that it cannot be done. At the same time it must be admitted that there are difficulties in the way. The easiest transition is made by the country boy who has grown tired of city life. He is used to the ways of the farm, and it will be a short task for him to learn the new methods and take up the furrow at the point where he left it a few years ago.

For the man who has lived all his life in the city the proposition is altogether different and much more difficult. He has all the ways of the new life to learn. He is unused to country life and country customs. Worst of all, he is unused to country methods. If a man listens too credulously to the land shark who tells him that on the farm he proposes to sell conditions are all so perfect that a gentle tickling of the soil will bring forth bountiful results disappointment is almost sure to follow. The real estate men are in the business for money, and if they can make a sale by minimizing the need of training for farming they are going to do it.

Farming is composed of three parts—the art, the science and the business. Of the three the latter is the only one that the average city man knows anything about. The same business principles that apply to any line of business hold good on the farm. Common sense and a fair amount of business ability comprise the chief essentials to success in handling the business end of farming.

There remain the art and the science. For a young man undoubtedly the best place to learn the science of farming is in a school or college. The agricultural college offers the most complete course of instruction along this line. A considerable share of the enrollment at the agricultural college is made up of city boys who are there to learn the science of farming. I have known many of these college made city farmers—a combination that would have shocked the practical man of the past generation into insensibility. I have known many of them to go to farming or to follow some line of work closely related to farming, and I have yet to see the first failure.

A college education means a considerable cost in both time and money. The city man who wants to turn farmer seldom has a very large supply of the latter. To such men the secondary courses in agriculture, or "short courses," make a special appeal. A short course of a year or two years in one of these schools will go a long way toward grounding the city farmer in the principles of scientific agriculture. Even such a course is impossible for the greater share of the city men who see the opportunities of farm life and would like to become farmers. The next best thing is a course of home study. A number of agricultural colleges offer correspondence courses in agriculture, by means of which the science of agriculture can be learned quite thoroughly. Then there are a great number of experiment station and government bulletins which may be had for the asking. There are many good books on agriculture in its various branches. Last, but by no means least, there is the agricultural press. Much of the advancement that has been made in agriculture is due to the agricultural papers. They stand for all that is best and most progressive in rural life, and they contain a fund of information on methods of farm practice that are invaluable to a beginner.

There yet remains the art of farming—that is, the art of handling the plow, of caring for the horses, of feeding the cows, of regulating the machinery and the thousand and one other things that the farmer must know how to do. The only way the art of farming can be learned is by practice. The best way for the city man with limited capital to learn is to hire out to some good farmer by the month. Farm help is scarce, and farmers are always glad to get faithful men at fair wages. They prefer skilled men, but these are often impossible to obtain. It is not at all difficult for a sober, industrious city man who really wants to learn farming to get a job with a good farmer. In such a place he can learn how to meet all the emergencies that come up on a farm. It is even easier for a married man to get this sort of job than it is for a single man. Farmers have a theory, which is generally correct, that married men are more to be depended upon. Many of them are willing to furnish a house and garden to a man for the sake of getting one with a family.

After spending a year or two working for some one else the would be farmer will have a fairly good idea of the art of farming. If he has been putting in his spare moments studying he will have a fair understanding of the science of farming. His own common sense and the training he has received in town will fit him to handle the business end. He is now in a position where he can plan on going to work for himself. He will have saved something from his wages while on the farm, and he probably had a little money saved up before. Then comes the question of whether to buy or to rent. A good many beginners in farming make the mistake of tying all their capital up in land and having nothing left for stock and equipment. In order to make the farm pay the farmer must have plenty of working capital. It is usually better to rent for a few years until enough money has been saved to make a fair payment on the land. Then a farm can be bought without robbing the equipment fund.

The question of where to locate is an important one and one which the conflicting mass of evidence makes hard to decide. The irrigated districts of the west offer some of the best opportunities to be found anywhere. The country is new, and settlers are welcome. Land is high, but it does not take much of it to yield a good living.

The dry farming districts of the west have been loudly boomed. This dry farming land can be bought very cheaply. It costs little to get a start. At the same time the man who goes on a dry farm must remember that only half of his land will yield a crop each year, sometimes not more than a third of it. The principle of dry farming is to cultivate the land for a year or two without sowing a crop. This prevents the rain which falls from evaporating, and by the second or third year enough moisture will have been stored up to raise a crop. No one should think of going on a dry farm without having enough money laid by to pay expenses for two or three years without any income. Dry farming means many losses and much discouragement, but the success of many dry farmers proves that it offers opportunities to the man who has the courage to stick.

The fertile lands of the middle west have been little advertised of late, and many people are of the opinion that this part of the country is already fully settled. This is far from being the case. The Mississippi valley could support four or five times its present farming population with ease. Land is high, but it is worth the price. The middle west offers the advantage of progressive neighbors, good churches, schools and colleges and modern conveniences of every sort. There are thousands of chances for the city man in this section.

In the east probably the best opportunities are found in truck farming. Only a small tract of land is required, and the returns are large.

The abandoned farms of New England can be purchased very cheaply. They can never be made as productive as the lands farther west, but under proper treatment the fertility can be restored and a very comfortable profit secured from them.

The agricultural opportunities of the south have been little advertised, yet there is no section of the country where the opportunities of the small farmer are greater. Diversified farming and stock raising are a comparatively new thing in this section. The men who are growing less cotton and more corn and hogs and dairy cows are getting ahead. Land is cheaper here than in many parts of the country and can be made very productive.

HOW J. K. TENER STANDS AT HOME

NEIGHBORS STRONG FOR HIM

Those Who Know Him Best Are Most Enthusiastic In Support of His Candidacy.

A character study of John Kinley Tener, and a pen picture of scenes in the little town of Charleroi upon the occasion of the recent demonstration there in honor of the Republican nominee for governor, given by John O'Donnell, editor of the Uniontown Morning Herald, after witnessing the ovations, will interest the voters in all sections of the commonwealth.

Mr. O'Donnell, who for more than twenty years was on the editorial staff of the Pittsburg Dispatch, and who is recognized as one of the most independent and versatile journalists in Pennsylvania, told in his own paper what he saw and heard in Charleroi.

This is what he wrote over his signature, "J. O'D.":

"The late James S. McKean, better known as 'Jim,' was a politician, banker and builder. He served a term as postmaster in Pittsburg. He was one of the men who placed the big Union Trust company, now prosperous and powerful, on the road to success. He was also one of the men who made the town of Charleroi possible, and its main street has been named in his honor. Had there been no McKean, there would probably have been no Charleroi now, and no candidate for governor of Pennsylvania by the name of John Kinley Tener. And I believe I know Jim McKean.

"There are seven boys in the Tener family, I think, and they all look alike. They are tall, erect, clear-eyed, clear-skinned and cleanlimbed, with features which denote great keenness of mind and profiles that are Gibsonesque. Wallace Tener, one of these boys, sat for a moment or two on the balcony of the Coyle theater, in Charleroi, on Saturday night, and watched the thousands of toilers from the great Monongahela valley, with Tener banners aloft, march by to the steady tread of martial music. Noting the size, the enthusiasm and the character of the pageant, with the keenness of perception peculiar to the Tener family, he also noted the spontaneity and sincerity of the demonstration. And as he realized that it was all in his brother's honor, that it was a tribute to his worth as a man and an evidence of the affection in which he is held by the thousands who know him, a tear dimmed his eye and he quietly arose as a mark of reverent acknowledgment.

"Just then some one happened to make a remark befitting the occasion and Walter Tener broke the silence of the moment. 'Away back several years ago,' said he, 'when the Brotherhood base ball movement went up the spout and John was out of work, the tender of a position in the bank down here came to him. I did not want him to take it; none of us did. We told him something would turn up soon, but he said no; he would write out his acceptance that evening; he could not bear to be idle another day—he had been out of work two weeks.'

"That was all Wallace Tener said, but the inference was obvious. At that time Charleroi was a village handicapped by the lack of opportunities characteristic of every small town, and the Tener boys feared that John K. would bury himself.

"Yet today, at the age of forty-seven, still in his youth and at the height of his vigor, John K. Tener has achieved success far and above the most hopeful dreams of himself and his brothers. He is a leading banker of the Monongahela valley and the financial pivot upon which revolve all, or nearly all, of the bridge, street railroad and other important interests of his section. He has made his fortune. He has held the highest office in the grand and noble order of Elks. He has made his mark in the halls of congress, and now the Republicans of the state have made him their candidate for governor. So much for the accident of selection and his choice of Charleroi.

"With a friend of mine I took a walk along the principal streets of Charleroi Saturday afternoon, for I wanted to look over the place that made possible the development of John K. Tener. We passed stately business blocks, fine hotels, imposing banks, splendid residences and the hundreds of homes of working men, neat, attractive, well kept homes. While all were tastefully decorated there was yet another evidence of the deep esteem in which Tener is held by his friends and neighbors. In the windows of little parlors, in the festoons on the modest porches in whatever conspicuous places were available, could be seen the pictures of the candidate. Regardless of racial, religious or political predilections the homes of the people bore this bit of testimony to the deep regard for him who is known and loved by every man, woman and child there. Here and there an aproned matron, industrious daughter or some other member of the household was engaged in displaying the lithograph, thus showing that John K. Tener has a place in the homes as well as the hearts of all the people of this town. It is a pity women haven't the right to vote.

Has an Ideal Wife.

"And what was true of Charleroi was also true of the whole valley. Monessen, just over the river, contributed the largest quota. George Nash sent 2500 men across the bridge with the bands playing, banners flying and every mother's son shouting for Tener and Charleroi. Donora did the same, and so did Monongahela and California, and Belle Vernon, and Fayette City, for the valley from Brownsville to McKeesport is solid for John K. Of all the happy hearts in Charleroi Saturday night none were happier than those of Mr. and Mrs. Tener. Cultured, charming, witty and sensible, Mrs. Tener is fitted to become the ideal mistress of any executive mansion. A born politician and tactician, she is perfectly at home in every gathering, her gracious personality radiating cheer and good will in every direction.

"Saturday's demonstration would prove an object lesson to many another town. Charleroi knows neither political factions, nationalities nor religions. Its enthusiasm and sympathies are never divided when it comes to conserving its reputation. The unanimity with which the rich and the poor, the master and the man, the merchant and his clerk went about the work of making the day a success was sublime. Men who in business life do little but give orders took them readily from men who usually receive them. When it came to pushing there was a place for every shoulder, and every shoulder was in its place.

"Let no man think for a moment that John K. Tener is any man's man. He may lack the spread-eagleism and the vociferousness characteristic of the average politician; he does not speak in measured periods; he does not gesticulate; he does not furnish funny stories instead of facts. On the contrary, he takes his candidacy seriously. He knows full well the weight of its responsibility. In a word, his utmost aim is to make good. While he knows thousands and calls them all by their first names, he makes no pretensions to being considered a 'hail fellow well met.' His handshake is firm, yet without the hypocrisy of feigned heartiness. He has a clear eye and a direct look and a bearing which seems to say: 'I know what my duty is and I will perform it; can I expect the same from you?'

"Educated in the common schools, endowed by his ancestry with an active mind and a healthy body, he early sought his pastime on the base ball lots. As a pitcher on the Chicago team he was thoroughly drilled in discipline. He knows what it is to stand on the firing line, taunted by the jeers or spurred by the cheers of thousands, his temper always cool aond his nerve never shaken. From this stern school he drifted into the realm of business, carrying with him the same judgment and decision which made him a victor on the field. Now, as a candidate for the highest office in the gift of the millions of the state, and during the stress of a hot campaign, he can be depended upon to maintain the same poise that made him a winner in business and athletics. He is not a man to shy at the cars.

Knows How to Say "No."

"Subserviency is not a weakness of John K. Tener. There is too much Irish in his makeup for us to expect, or his political enemies to hope, that he will bend the pregnant knee at the behest of any man or set of men. Though modest of demeanor, he is nevertheless fearless and independent. His life is clean, his record above reproach. He acknowledges no conditions which are dishonorable; he bows to no power but the will of the people. The asset which he prizes most highly is neither that of wealth, family nor social position—it is the love, the esteem, the friendship, the regard of the men and women who have known him long enough to realize that beyond peradventure his 'yes' is 'yes;' that his 'no' is 'no;' that his word is as good as his bond; that he never either by word or action injured his neighbor in his life; that his one great aim has been to brighten the lives and improve the conditions of the people of his town and community.

"Were John Kinley Tener to believe that the governorship of Pennsylvania meant his departure in any one particular from the principles which have won for him his splendid standing in Charleroi and throughout the Monongahela valley, where he is known better than he is anywhere else, I miss my guess if he would not stretch himself to his full six feet five inches or thereabouts and tell the men who proposed it, no matter how exalted their political or business position, to go to blazes and take the governorship with them."

Candidates On the Go.

The itinerary of the Republican state candidates this week takes them to the picnic of the Patrons of Husbandry, at Center Hall, Center county; the convention of the State League of Republican Clubs, at Pottsville; then to Reading and to the opening meeting of the campaign in Lehigh county, near Allentown.

State Chairman Henry W. Walton says he is determined to have the candidates visit every county in the state, and in order to do this they will be kept constantly on the go from now until election day.

This year the progressive western end of the state has been recognized in the selection of the party's standard bearer, and within the last few days there has been an exhibition of appreciation of this fact in a remarkable demonstration in honor of Mr. Tener by his admirers in Charleroi and surrounding towns representing all shades of political opinion and religious belief, and in tributes of esteem from the toilers of Pittsburg and vicinity.

Laundry Tips.

Irons must be much hotter for starched pieces than for flannels. For these they must barely hiss under the touch of a moistened finger.

To get the right finish on any piece of ironing it must be ironed until dry. Attack the started pieces and those that require most work early in the action.

A few of the essentials to the ironing table, says Christine Terhune Herrick in Woman's Home Companion, besides the table itself and the irons, are an iron-stand, an iron holder with an asbestos lining, a bit of beeswax tied up in a piece of cheesecloth, a bowl of warm water with a sponge or a piece of soft linen with which may be dampened scallops and edgings which have become too dry to iron well, a piece of paper folded with several thicknesses on which to test the heat of the iron and to wipe any black smirch from it.

Take your clothes from the line as soon as possible after they are dry. They are likely to become too stiff if left out longer than necessary.

Be especially careful to bring starched clothes in as soon as they are dry. When it is cold, the freezing takes out the stiffness, and when the weather is damp the clothes become limp.

In dampening clothes for ironing use either a whisk or one of the regular clothes sprinklers which are made for this special purpose, and have the water in it hot or at least very warm. Sprinkle one piece at a time, spreading it out smooth before sprinkling, and roll up tightly.

Beau's Birthday.

There was a canine birthday party at the new home of Bide-a-Wee, No. 264 East Sixty-fifth street, in honor of Beau, Mrs. Ulysses S. Kibbe's pet fox terrier, which, by the way, was the inspiration of the home in the beginning, says The New York Tribune. Beau celebrated the twelfth anniversary of his birth, and all the 100 dogs and 75 cats that are domiciled in the new animal hostelry had special ribbons and had extra helpings of a superior stew for which dog epicures have a particular liking.

When the last tidbit had vanished all the parlor boarders, those exclusive animals that look out from behind wire cages upon their more fortunate, though less aristocratic, fellows in the back yard, barked many happy returns of the day to Beau. The rear yard-dogs were less boisterous and merely whined their congratulations.

Mrs. Kibbe, who is president of the Bide-a-Wee Society, also celebrated Beau's birthday by making a special offer to dog and cat lovers which held good until June 1. For the sum of 50 cents to cover expressage, a nice dog or cat was sent on request to any one living within one hundred miles of New York. Just now the dogs and cats are coming in faster than they can be distributed, though persons of all conditions come begging for animals.

Concedes Stewart's Defeat.

The Clearfield "Republican," the leading Democratic paper in Clearfield county, concedes that it is very doubtful that Dr. Samuel S. Stewart, the new Democratic nominee for State Senator in the Centre—Clearfield district, can be elected. In its issue of last week, the Clearfield "Republican" published the following:

"Dr. Stewart's name was the only one presented. Centre county had no candidate. The nomination was made unanimously and the official certificate executed.

"There was much conjecture all over the district ever since Dimeling withdrew as to the identity of the man to take his place on the ticket. When he called some Centre county leaders and some of his Clearfield friends together Wednesday evening, August 24th, to announce his intention of getting out of the fight, the place was offered to Colonel Hugh S. Taylor and to Dr. F. C. White, of Centre. It was offered to several Clearfield Democrats who could not see their way clear to take up the burden. Dr. Stewart's name was not publicly connected with the vacancy until Wednesday of this week. When the Centre county conferees arrived in Clearfield at 6 o'clock Wednesday evening they were at sea as to who would be named. But during the day Dr. Stewart agreed to accept the place if tendered him, and the official tender was made as above stated and he accepted.

"Dr. Stewart is a native of this county, was born in Bradford township, son of the late Daniel Stewart. He graduated from Jefferson Medical College, Philadelphia, in 1881. He began practicing in Woodland and in 1883 moved to Clearfield, where he had successfully practiced ever since. He was elected Burgees of Clearfield in 1891 and re-elected in 1892 and 1893. He is at present serving his second term on the School Board of Clearfield.

"Had Dr. Stewart or any other Democrat of his calibre been placed in nomination for the State Senate in this district at the June primaries he would have stood a splendid chance of being elected in November. But the terrible mix-up now existing, due to the insistence of the Dimelings that their mismanagement be continued, has made it more than doubtful that any Democrat can win. So many Democrats have pledged themselves to Alexander that the prospects at this distance from the election are not in the least encouraging.

"Dr. Stewart says he will make a clean, vigorous contest and hopes to win."

The GOOSE GIRL

By HAROLD MacGRATH

Copyright, 1909, by the Bobbs-Merrill Company

"I will kill you for this!"

"So?" The old man thrust him back several feet without any visible exertion. He let his staff slide into his hand.

"I WILL KILL YOU FOR THIS."

The colonel drew his saber and lunged toward his assailant. The old man laughed. He turned the thrust with his staff. Then the old man struck back. The saber rattled to the stone flooring. The victor put his foot upon it.

On his part the colonel's blood suddenly cooled.

"My sword," the colonel demanded.

"I could have broken it half a dozen times. Here, take it. But be wise in the future and draw it only in the right."

Outside the old man laid his hand on the colonel's arm.

"You must never bother her again. Listen. You are Colonel von Wallenstein; you are something more besides."

"What do you infer?"

"I infer nothing. Now and then there happens strange leakage in the duke's affairs. The man is well paid. He is a gambler, and one is always reasonably certain that the gambler will be wanting money. Do you understand?"

"Who are you?"

"Who I am is of no present consequence. But I know who and what you are. If you behave yourself you will be allowed to continue in prosperity, but if you attempt to molest that girl again there will be no more gold coming over the frontier from Jugendheit. Now do you understand?"

"Yes," weakly.

"Go. But be advised and walk circumspectly."

The colonel, pale and distrait, saw in his mind's eye a squad of soldiers, a wall, a single volley and a dishonored roll of earth. Military informers were given short shrift. The colonel went to the barracks.

CHAPTER X.

GRUMBACH PICKS UP A LOCKET.

"I AM going into the garden, Gretchen. Bring me a stein of brown."

The mountaineer smiled genially.

"But I am not working here any more," said Gretchen.

"She has had a fortune left her," said Frau Bauer.

"Well, well!" The mountaineer seemed vastly pleased. "And how much is this fortune?"

"Two thousand crowns." Gretchen was not sure, but to her there always seemed to be a secret laughter behind those clear eyes.

"Handsome! And what will you do now?"

"Study for the opera."

The old man was jubilant.

"Where were you going when this popinjay stopped you?" he cried.

"To the clock mender's."

"I've nothing to do. I'll go with you. I've an idea that I should like to talk with you about a very important matter. Will you come into the garden with me now?"

"Yes, herr."

"So you are going to become a prima donna?" he began, seating himself opposite her on a chair in the garden.

"I am going to try," she smiled.

"Have you any dreams? I mean the kind one has in the daytime—when the eyes are wide open."

"Oh, yes!"

"Who has not dreamed of riding in carriages, of dressing in silks, of wearing rich ornaments?"

"Ah!" Gretchen clasped her hands. "And there are palaces too."

"To be sure. How would you like a dream of this kind to come true?"

"Do they ever come true?"

"In this particular case I am a fairy. With one touch of my wand—this oak staff—I can bring you all these things you have dreamed about. How would you like a little palace, with servants at your beck and call, with carriages to ride in, with silks and velvets to wear and jewels to adorn your hair?"

A shadow fell upon her face.

"By what right should I possess these things?"

"By the supreme right of beauty—beauty alone."

"Come, let us go for your clock," he said, rising. "I am an old fool."

Gretchen had gone home with her clock, but still Herr Ludwig, as the mountaineer called himself, tarried in the dim and musty shop.

"I've a watch I should like you to look over," he said to the clockmaker.

The clock mender literally pounced upon it. "Where did you get a watch like this?" he demanded suspiciously.

"It is mine. You will find my name engraved inside the back lid."

The clock mender pried open the case, adjusted his glass and dropped it, shaking with terror.

"So this is the end," the amazed watchmaker gasped, "of all my labors, to me and to what little I have left!"

"Fiddlesticks! I am here for no purpose regarding you, comrade. Your secret is as dead as it ever was."

"Gott! For seventeen, eighteen years I have traveled hither and thither, always on some false clew. Never a band of gypsies I heard of that I did not seek them out. Nothing, nothing! You will never know what I have gone through, and uselessly, to prove my innocence. What benefit to me would have been a crime like that of which I was accused? Was I not high in honor and wealth? What benefit to me, I say—all my estates confiscated, my wife dead of shame!"

"But why the clocks?" in wonder.

"It was a pastime of mine when I was a boy. I used to be tinkering among all the clocks in the house. The grand duke has a wonderful Friesian clock. One day it fell out of order, and the court jeweler could do nothing with it. I was summoned—I! No one recognized me, I have changed so. I had begun to give up hope when the gypsy I was seeking was seen by one of my agents. He alone knows the secret. And I am waiting, waiting. But you believe, Ludwig?"

THE CLOCK MENDER PRIED OPEN THE CASE.

"Carl, you are innocent of it all. Come to Jugendheit."

"No, Ludwig; this is my country, however unjustly it has treated me."

"Yes, yes. But if your gypsy fails you?"

"Still I shall remain. I am only sixty-eight, yet no one would believe me under eighty. There were letters found in my desk, all forgeries. I fled to Paris. I wrote Herbeck once while there. He believed that I was innocent."

"He keeps a steady hand on the duke."

"But you—what are you doing in Dreiberg in this guise?"

"Well, once upon a time there lived a king. He was young. He had an uncle who watched over him and his affairs. This prince regent had an idea regarding the future welfare of this nephew. He would bring him up to be a man, well educated, broad minded and clean lived. The lad grew up clean in mind, strong in body, liberal, a fine prince. In his palace few saw anything of him after his fifteenth year. He went into the world under an assumed name. By and by he came home quietly. In one month he was to be coronated. And now what do you think? He must have one more adventure, just one. And one morning his uncle found him gone. Ah! The prince regent set it going that his majesty had gone a-hunting in Bavaria. Then the prince regent put on some old clothes and went a-venturing himself."

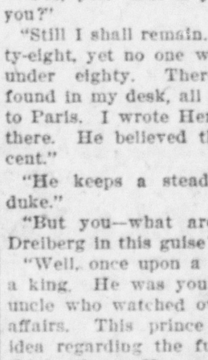
"And the end?"

"God knows," said Ludwig.

"And fatuous fool that this uncle was. He tried to marry off his nephew."

"I understand. But if you are discovered here you will be harshly dealt with."

The other shrugged and picked up his watch. "Can I be of material assistance? No? Proud old imbecile!" said the mountaineer kindly. "You have been deeply wronged, but some day you will be right. I myself shall see what can be done with the duke."



"PROUD OLD IMBECILE!"

"He will never be brought to reason unless indubitable evidence of my innocence confronts him. The place once occupied by my name is obliterated. I have given the best of my heart and of my brain to Ehrenstein—for this! I am innocent."

"I believe you. Remember, Grendheit will always welcome you. I must be going."

* * * * * * *

Carmichael walked his horse. This morning he had ridden out almost to the frontier and was now on his return.

No longer did Carmichael take the south pass for his morning rides. That was the favored going of her highness, and he avoided her now. In truth, he dared not meet her now; it would have been out of wisdom. She was to marry the king of Jugendheit; it was in the order of things that he ride alone.

The road to Eissen began about six miles north of the base of the Dreiberg mountain. It swerved to the east. As Carmichael reached the fork he heard the faroff mutter of hoofs. Coming along the road from Eissen were a train of riders. Carmichael laughed weakly.

Should he mount and be off before she made the turn? He waited.

She came in full flight, rosy, radiant, as lovely as Diana. With a short nod of her head she signaled for the two soldiers to fall back.

The two were embarrassed.

The little cavalcade directed its course toward the city.

"You have not been riding of late," she said.

Then she had missed him. Carmichael's heart expanded.

"I have ridden the same as usual, your highness, only I have taken this road for a change."

"Ah!" She patted the glistening neck of her mare. So he had purposely tried to avoid her? Why? She stole a sly glance at him. Why were not kings molded in this form? All the kings she had met had something the matter with them—crooked legs, weak eyes, bald, young or old, and daft over gaming tables and opera dancers. And the one man among them all—at least she had been informed that the king of Jugendheit was all of a man—had politely declined.

"I am guilty of lese majesty," he suggested.

"I shall not lock you up," she said, and added under her breath, "as my good father would like to. "Besides," she continued aloud, "I rather like to set the court by the ears. Ah, but I shall lead some king a merry life!" with a wicked gleam in her eyes.

"Frederick of Jugendheit?"

"Is it true that you have not heard yet? I have declined the honor."

"Your highness?"

"This, of course, is as yet a state secret, and my reason for telling you is not a princess's, but a woman's. Solve it if you can."

Carmichael fumbled the reins blindly. "They say that he is a handsome young man."

"What has that to do with it? The interest he takes in his kingdom is positively negative. There will be only one king in Jugendheit, and that will be the prince regent."

They were silent for a few minutes. Finally the ambassador spoke.

"I have some news for your highness. I am about to ask for my recall."

The color on her cheeks paled a shade lighter.

"Is not this sudden?" she asked.

"I am essentially a man of action, your highness. I am growing dull and stupid amid these charming pleasures. I am wicked enough to wish for war."

"Cherchez la femme!" she cried. "There is a woman?"

"Oh, yes!" recklessly.

"Then go to her, my friend; go to her." And she waved her crop over his head as in benediction.

He did not speak, but caught up the reins firmly. She did most of the talking, brightly and gayly, but his ears were dull for the undercurrent passed by him. He was thinking deeply of her.

Within a few hundred yards of the gates Carmichael saw a lonely figure sitting on the parapet. He would have recognized that square form anywhere.

"AH, BUT I SHALL LEAD SOME KING A MERRY LIFE!"

"Your highness, do you see that man yonder on the parapet? We fought in the same cavalry. He is covered with scars. Not one man in a thousand would have gone through what he did and lived."

"Is he an American?"

"By adoption. May I present him? It will be the joy of his life."

"Certainly. Brave men interest me."

Grumbach rose, thinking that the riders were going to pass him. But his friend Carmichael stopped his horse.

"Herr Grumbach," said Carmichael, "her serene highness desires me to present you."

Hans was stricken dumb.

She plied him with a number of questions—how many battles they had fought in, how many times they had been wounded.

Her highness' mare grew restive and began pawing the road. She reined in quickly. As she did so something yellow flashed downward to the ground. Grumbach hastened forward.

"GOTT!" HE MURMURED.

"My locket," said her highness anxiously.

"It is not broken, highness," said Grumbach. Then he handed it to her gravely.

"Thank you!" Her highness put the locket into a small purse which she carried in her belt, touched the mare, and sped up the road, Carmichael following.

Grumbach returned to the parapet.

"Gott!" he murmured.

His face was as livid as the scar on his head.

A JOINT RESOLUTION

Proposing an amendment to the Constitution of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, so as to consolidate the courts of common pleas of Allegheny County.

Section 1. Be it resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania in General Assembly met, That the following amendment to the Constitution of Pennsylvania be, and the same is hereby, proposed, in accordance with the eighteenth article thereof:—

That section six of article five be amended, by striking out the said section, and inserting in place thereof the following:

Section 6. In the county of Philadelphia all the jurisdiction and powers now vested in the district courts and courts of common pleas, subject to such changes as may be made by this Constitution or by law, shall be in Philadelphia vested in five distinct and separate courts of equal and co-ordinate jurisdiction, composed of three judges each. The said courts in Philadelphia shall be designated respectively as the court of common pleas number one, number two, number three, number four, and number five, but the number of said courts may be by law increased, from time to time, and shall be in like manner designated by successive numbers. The number of judges in any of said courts, or in any county where the establishment of an additional court may be authorized by law, may be increased, from time to time, and whenever such increase shall amount in the whole to three, such three judges shall compose a distinct and separate court as aforesaid, which shall be numbered as aforesaid. In Philadelphia all suits shall be instituted in the said courts of common pleas without designating the number of the said court, and the several courts shall distribute and apportion the business among them in such manner as shall be provided by rules of court, and each court, to which any suit shall be thus assigned, shall have exclusive jurisdiction thereof, subject to change of venue, as shall be provided by law.

In the county of Allegheny all the jurisdiction and powers now vested in the several numbered courts of common pleas shall be vested in one court of common pleas, composed of all the judges in commission in said courts. Such jurisdiction and powers shall extend to all proceedings at law and in equity which shall have been instituted in the several numbered courts, and shall be subject to such changes as may be made by law, and subject to change of venue as provided by law. The president judge of said court shall be selected as provided by law. The number of judges in said court may be by law increased from time to time. This amendment shall take effect on the first day of January succeeding its adoption.

Number Four

A JOINT RESOLUTION

Proposing an amendment to section eight, article nine, of the Constitution of Pennsylvania.

Section 1. Be it resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania in General Assembly met, That the following is proposed as an amendment to the Constitution of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, in accordance with the provisions of the eighteenth article thereof:—

Amendment to Article Nine, Section Eight.

Section 1. Amend section eight, article nine, of the Constitution of Pennsylvania, which reads as follows:—

"Section 8. The debt of any county, city, borough, township, school district, or other municipality or incorporated district, except as herein provided, shall never exceed seven per centum upon the assessed value of the taxable property therein, nor shall any such municipality or district incur any new debt, or increase its indebtedness to an amount exceeding two per centum upon such assessed valuation of property, without the assent of the electors thereof at a public election in such manner as shall be provided by law; but any city, the debt of which now exceeds seven per centum of such assessed valuation, may be authorized by law to increase the same three per centum, in the aggregate, at any one time, upon such valuation," so as to read as follows:—

Section 8. Paris Fashions.

The American woman has now reached the pass where she never buys her outfit for the season without first being sure what Paris has decided upon as the fashionable thing.

Following its usual custom, inaugurated several years ago, The North American will, on Sunday, September 18, issue its special Paris fashion number, it being an eight-page section in connection with its regular Sunday paper.

The styles represent the very latest in Paris dressmaking art. The designs printed were chosen from the best showings of the representative makers of fashionable garments. After seeing them the woman can form her own idea and make her own choice of the American goods that are offered. She can make sure that she is getting up-to-date garments. There is always a big demand for The North American's special fashion numbers. It is advisable to order of the agent or newsdealer well in advance.

We wish to acknowledge receipt of a letter from Edward Gephart, who resides at Drifting, marking up the date on the label on his copy of "The Republican." The fact that Mr. Gephart is a regular reader of a Centre County newspaper is the best evidence that he never loses his interest in the people and events in this county.

We were favored with a call by J. F. Hoover, of Penna. Furnace a few days ago. Mr. Hoover is one of "The Republican's" friends and his mission was to advance his subscription another year. We are frank enough to say that we are proud to have enrolled as subscribers men of the type of Mr. Hoover and our aim shall be to make "The Republican" so interesting that he will continue to be one of our regular readers for a long time to come.

It was with no little pleasure that we several days ago received a letter from S. F. McMonigal, of Irwin, Pa., enclosing sufficient of Uncle Sam's currency to adjust his subscription and advance the date on his paper to September, 1911. Each week as Mr. McMonigal receives his copy of the paper he will have the satisfaction of knowing that it is paid for one year ahead and also that the publisher is endeavoring to show his appreciation of paid-in-advance subscriptions by making "The Republican" the best and newsiest paper published in Centre County.

A very pleasant visitor at "The Republican" office on Saturday was Mrs. A. L. Rown, of Snow Shoe, who, with Mr. Rown had been spending the day very delightfully with Lock Haven friends. She called to advance her subscription to "The Republican" another year. In a few days Mr. Rown and the two boys, Roy and Chauncey, will take their annual trip to West Virginia. Last year Mrs. Rown accompanied them on the trip South, but this year she will remain at home, not having been any too well for some time past and very wisely concluding not to tax her strength by a long railroad journey. Railroad journeys are a common thing for her big husband, for he is an engineer on the Snow Shoe road, and a good one, too.

Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Nolan, of Tyrone, spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Kelleher.

Robert Cole, Jr., has accepted a nice position with the Keeler Company, at Williamsport.

Miss Eliza Short, of Milford, Delaware, is a guest at the home of Mr. and Mrs. L. T. Munson. John Munson, who is located at Baltimore, is spending a week at the parental home.

Our compliments to John H. Houser, of State College, who on Tuesday, last, sent us a nice little check, advancing the date on his copy of "The Republican" to September, 1911. Greetings of this kind from valued subscribers are greatly appreciated.

Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Wetzel, of Toledo, Ohio, who have been in England for several months, are visiting Bellefonte friends. Mrs. Archibald Allison was a State College visitors this week. She accompanied Irvin Humes, Jr., of Latrobe, who became enrolled as a student. The young man's father is a brother of Mrs. Allison and one time resided in Bellefonte, his home being in Allegheny Street, where now Sheffer's grocery store is located.

Just take a few minutes off and study the new ad of James I. Schofield's ever popular harness shop, appearing on the fifth page of "The Republican." Mr. Schofield and his son, E. N. Schofield, who is engaged in business with him, have a proposition which is well worth considering if you are even thinking about purchasing something especially fine in the line of harness and at prices which will appeal to the man who wants the best and at reasonable prices.

Herbert Miller has returned home from Philadelphia, having taken his little son, Paul Irvin Miller, to the Mt. Airy school for his second year. Paul is but 6 years old and is being educated in that famous school for the instruction of mute children. Mr. Miller met with an unusual experience while in Philadelphia. Happening to drop into a business house he became engaged in conversation with one of the clerks. On explaining his mission in the city Mr. Miller was surprised to learn from the clerk, Robert Brewster, that the latter also has a mute son at the Mt. Airy school.

Joseph Alexander, of Madera, Clearfield County, was in town between trains on Monday, enroute for the grangers picnic. He found time to make a little call at "The Republican" office during the morning. Mr. Alexander, as everybody knows, is the Republican nominee for State Senator in the Centre-Clearfield district and he says that he is more than pleased with the assurances of support he is receiving wherever he goes. Mr. Alexander is an old soldier, with a splendid record, and there is nothing of which he is more proud than the fact that he served in the famous old Bucktail regiment.

Mrs. John Hewitt entertained yesterday.

A. A. Hoffman came down from Corning, N. Y., this week to spend some time with Bellefonte friends.

Cecil, the infant son of Mr. and Mrs. William J. Tackett, of Rush township, died on Friday, last, from cholera infantum.

Miss Mary Blanchard departed, on Friday, last, for Newport, where with Misses Pansy and Christine Blanchard she is spending a week at the Morris cottage.

Arthur Simler, a son of George B. Simler, of Philipsburg, was last week admitted as a member of the Cambria County bar. He will practice in Johnstown.

Lawyer George W. Zeigler and Charles H. Rowland, of Philipsburg, are mixing business with pleasure on a trip to California, planning to return on September 26th.

The ladies of the United Bretheran church will hold a chicken and waffle supper at the church annex this, (Thursday) evening. Supper, 25 cents. Ice cream and cake, extra. Proceeds for the benefit of the church.

In a game on Saturday between the Philipsburg and Osceola baseball teams, Dugan, Osceola's star catcher, had a leg broken. Many Bellefonte "fans" will recall his fine playing on the local diamond during the season just closed.

A very genial caller at "The Republican" office recently was J. R. Williams, of Martha, who dropped in to mark up the date on the label on his paper. Mr. Williams is a valued and regular reader of "The Republican" and we trust that he will continue such for many years to come.

Mrs. James Noonan entertained at dinner on Thursday night, last, in honor of her nieces, Misses Ruth and Louise Seymour, of New York. Covers were laid for eight. Frank Seymour, who had been visiting the Noonans for ten days, has returned to his home, in New York.

Mr. and Mrs. William Chamberlain, of Milton, were this week guests at the home of the former's sister, Mrs. A. O. Furst, on West Linn Street. Mr. Chamberlain is one of those fine, courtly old gentlemen who find sunshine where so many others see nothing but trouble, and as might be expected he makes friends whereever he goes.

Martin Luther Miller, an uncle of Building Inspector M. W. Craine, who resides at Pennsylvania Furnace, Center county, attended the Grand Army reunion in this city. Mr. Miller served in the Pennsylvania militia during the war and thus while not a member of the Grand Army, he enjoys meeting those with whom he was associated during the days of the war.—Altoona Gazette.

M. W. Fetzer, of Yarnell, was a pleasant caller at "The Republican" office on Saturday, taking time while in town to drop in and advance his subscription to September, 1911. Mr. Fetzer is kept pretty busy these days. A part of each year he devotes to raising vegetables, for all of which he finds a ready market at Snow Shoe. The fact that Snow Shoe people pay him attractive prices is pretty good indication that the quality of his vegetables is of the highest standard.

Walter Gaither, of Pittsburg, who is private secretary to John K. Tener and who yesterday accompanied the Republican gubernatorial nominee to the grangers picnic, is a former Pittsburg newspaper man. Mr. Gaither and the editor of "The Republican" worked on Pittsburg newspapers at the same time, about ten years ago. While Pittsburg has trained many of the best newspaper men to be found in the eastern cities, Waller Gaither was one of the best reporters that ever turned in "copy" in the Smoky City. That he is a young man of sterling worth and exceptional ability is demonstrated in the fact that when Mr. Tener was elected to Congress he prevailed on Mr. Gaither to accompany him to Washington as his private secretary.

"TO-MORROW," said the languid man, "I'll have my life insured, I guess; I know it is the safest plan, to save my children from distress." And when the morrow came around, they placed him gently in a box; at break of morning he was found as dead as Julius Caesar's ox. His widow now is scrubbing floors, and washing shirts, and splitting wood, and doing fifty other chores that she may rear her wailing brood.

"TO-MORROW," said the careless jay, "I'll take an hour, and make my will; and then if I should pass away, the wife and kids will know no ill." The morrow came serene and nice, the weather mild with signs of rain; the careless jay was placed on ice, emabalming fluid in his brain. Alas, alas poor careless jay! The lawyers got his pile of cash; his wife is toiling night and day to keep the kids in clothes and hash.

TO-MORROW is the ambushed walk avoided by the circumspect. To-morrow is the fatal rock on which a million ships are wrecked.
